

FARMERS BEGIN CUTTING WHEAT

Nick Deppert, Thomas Bridgewater and William Booth Among the First to Start the Binders.

QUALITY OF GRAIN IS GOOD

Many of the Farmers Will Be in No Hurry to Thresh Because of Other Farm Work.

Within a few days the hum of the binder will be heard in all parts of the county and the farmers will be in the thick of the wheat harvest. The work in a few fields began the first of this week, but the harvest will not be general over the county until the first or probably the latter part of next week. Among the farmers who were the first to begin the harvest are, Nick Deppert of Sulphur Springs, Thomas Bridgewater of Pleasant Grove and William Booth of the New Driftwood neighborhood.

As was expected, the yield this year will be considerably lighter than the average, but the farmers in several sections of the county report that the harvest will be much better than at first anticipated. It is said that the quality of the grain is very good in most places. The cool weather during the past few days has retarded the wheat from ripening rapidly, and it is stated that this has given the grain an excellent opportunity to develop more fully than if the weather had been very warm. It is believed that new wheat will start at a good price, for it is reported all over the country that the yield will be somewhat lighter this year than usual.

Some of the first grain that has been cut will likely be ready to thresh in about two weeks. The owners of the threshing outfits have placed their machines in first class condition so that the work can start just as soon as the grain is ready.

Some of the farmers will be in no hurry to thresh their wheat this summer as they will be crowded with other work which they believe should given attention before the threshing begins.

Many of the corn fields need plowing, and there is much other work which should be looked after. All of the corn has been planted in this county although some of it is not yet through the ground, the planting having been delayed on account of the wet weather.

Most of the farmers have finished cutting their clover, and it is reported that the yield is much better than the average in his county. The quality is also reported very fine.

GOOD CLOVER CROP

William Hodapp Cuts Thirty-six Loads of Hay From Ten Acres.

William Hodapp, a farmer living near Cortland, has finished cutting his clover hay and finds that the crop is very heavy. He also reports that the quality is much better than usual.

Mr. Hodapp has ten acres in clover and from this cut thirty-six loads, each load varying from a ton to one and a half tons in weight. This is much better than last year, as he cut as much hay off the ten acres this summer that he did from seventeen acres last year. It is considered that two loads to the acre is a good crop.

BOOM FOR JOHN W. KERN GROWS

Indiana Delegates Instructed to Support Marshall Until All Hope Is Lost.

Baltimore, June 26.—Spread of the report among the Indiana boosters of Governor Marshall for the presidential nomination that Charles E. Murphy, Tammany Hall leader, had given a considerable part of last evening to consideration of the Indiana Governor's personality, his political history, his nearly four years of administration, etc., aroused fresh hope in the minds of the Indians today that the Hoosier Governor was being seriously considered by the real powers in the preparations for the nomination. No report came from Murphy quarters to indicate whether the Tammany boss was favorably impressed by what he had heard. Reports have a way of not coming from Murphy's room and the New York boss continued as much of a sphinx as on the first night of his arrival.

The Indians refused to regard Senator John W. Kern as a factor in the matter, although elsewhere today many believed that the combination of Bryan, Kern and Wilson might make Kern a formidable factor. The Hoosiers are trusting Kern to stand by the pledge of the state to support

CONSERVATIVES SEEK TO CONCILIATE W. J. BRYAN

COMMONER IS BUSY WRITING PLATFORM

Nebraskan Statesman, Although Defeated, Still Has Great Influence at Convention.

WILL CONTINUE HIS FIGHT

Trying to Arouse the "People at Home" to Prevent Nomination of Reactionary Candidate.

Baltimore, June 26.—Though, in the light of the square alignment of reactionaries and progressives, which he forced yesterday, it is generally admitted here even by his closest friends that William Jennings Bryan will not be the nominee of the Baltimore convention. He is still the hub around which the entire wheel still revolves.

Mr. Bryan was writing the platform today. Though defeated yesterday, and in his own letters he is trying to arouse the people "at home" to prevent the nomination of a reactionary by pointing out the strong possibilities of such a nominee, every one here recognizes that no candidate will be nominated here that does not have the Bryan O. K. stamp on him. In short, Bryan defeated yesterday, is the master of the situation here.

All the speculation today was on what Bryan would write into the platform. Bryan himself, before entering the resolutions committee was noncommittal on this course. He was not the least downcast over his defeat for the temporary chairmanship.

"You know," he said to newspaper men, "I have fattened sixteen years on defeat, and, as I said yesterday, most of the things that I stood for have been written into law, or the Republicans are putting into their platform now. I was glad they had that Jackson text blazoned there: 'He never sold the truth to serve the hour.'"

To some friends Mr. Bryan said: "Well, the machine didn't skid."

He was asked what he favored going into the platform and if it would be progressive.

"Well," he replied, "in the light of what happened yesterday, there is no reason to expect a progressive platform, is there?"

His interrogators conveyed the information that the general opinion was that he would write the platform, or pass on everything that went into it, and therefore expected it would be progressive.

The smile that has not come off in sixteen years spread wider over his face and he chuckled "You don't mean to say that the delegates have been hearing from home already?" he said in evasion.

SENATOR KERN REFUSED HONOR

Credentials Committee Not Able to Report and Convention Adjourned Until Tonight.

Bulletin.
Baltimore, June 24.—A movement to test the sentiment in favor of Senator Kern has been started here by some of the progressives, who feel that it will be impossible to secure a two-thirds vote on either Speaker Clark or Governor Wilson. It is said the movement is gaining strength.

By United Press.

Baltimore, June 26.—William Jennings Bryan will continue his progressive fight at the democratic national convention. His defeat for temporary chairman yesterday did not cause him to lessen the intensity of his fight, and he has given the conservatives notice that he will be "on the job" until the closing session.

As was suggested by Judge Parker in his speech yesterday after being elected temporary chairman of the convention, Col. Bryan this morning was offered the chairmanship of the resolutions committee, but he flatly refused to accept it. He stated that he wanted to remain in a position where he could take a hand in the fight for a progressive platform. The place was then offered to Senator Kern and he was elected.

Joseph Bell, of Indianapolis, attorney for Crawford Fairbanks was elected chairman of the credentials committee.

It is evident that every effort is being made to bring about a harmonious convention, and that the game of politics is being played with the greatest caution. A play for harmony was made today when it was announced that Representative Ollie James of Kentucky, a great friend of W. J. Bryan, was the unanimous choice of the committee for permanent chairman of the convention.

Th place was offered to Senator Kern and several other democratic politicians, but they sent word to the committee that they could not serve.

Bryan presented a motion before the resolutions committee to adopt the platform after and not before the national ticket was named. This resolution was carried by a vote of 41 to 11. The committee decided upon this action, it is said, in order to make the candidates run on the platform rather than use the platform to boom any particular candidate.

The credentials committee was unable to have their report ready for the convention when it convened at

Evidence That Convention Will Be Expeditious.
COMPROMISE TALK IS HEARD
An Apparent Desire On All Sides To Avoid Hard Feelings.

Baltimore, June 26.—With every apparent determination on the part of the delegates to push things to an early conclusion, the Democratic national convention reassembled shortly after noon today. The various committees had been in session during the night and forenoon and were prepared to report promptly. The report of the committee on credentials, which fixes the permanent roll of the convention, was presented by its chairman, Joseph E. Bell of Indianapolis. Mr. Bell is the law partner of Senator John W. Kern, who was the Indiana member of the important committee on resolutions which prepares the "platform" of the convention. This committee will report, by its chairman, William Jennings Bryan, late this afternoon.

As the delegates get settled in their places the talk of a compromise candidate grows more insistent. The Democratic leaders held a secret conference early this morning and general report has it that the subject of nominating Mayor Wm. J. Gaynor of New York was discussed. There was a strong feeling of the New York delegation this morning. The Gaynor folks are predicting that Mayor Gaynor will be the Democratic candidate for president. They are basing this prediction on the vote cast for temporary chairman of the convention. Certainly there is much talk of Gaynor and his supporters insist that he is the logical compromise candidate. The convention is flooded with Gaynor buttons with a picture of the mayor and around it the following: "The solution of the Democratic problem." The talk of Senator John W. Kern as a real compromise proposition also permeates in many quarters.

There was cheering in the Gaynor headquarters when the news got to the mayor's friends that Charles F. Murphy, Tammany leader, had finally made up his mind to give the mayor New York's ninety votes on the first ballot. Some members of the Indiana delegation assured Murphy that if Marshall could not be nominated they would like to have Gaynor.

OPENING SESSION
With Mention of Parker's Name the Battle Was On.

Baltimore, June 26.—The Democratic national convention, like its Republican predecessor at Chicago, started out with a fight over the seating of the temporary chairman. The instant Cardinal Gibbons's appeal for divine guidance was over, the uproar started. The Bryansites were up and doing. Their cheers for the Nebraskan angered the Parker people, who shouted angrily at them. Chairman Mack ordered the aisles to be cleared, but it was a fruitless effort. Tom Taggart began to shout orders to the assistant sergeant-at-arms. In an interval of quiet Tom Smith of Tammany hall, the reading clerk, rattled off the list of officers chosen by the national committee, and heading the list was the name of Alton B. Parker. The band promptly broke loose with "Oh You Great Big Beautiful Doll," and the whole convention laughed out loud.

With Parker's name the battle was on. Charles F. Murphy's block of ninety from New York raised a yell for the judge. Roger Sullivan raised his "ring" of fifty-eight from Illinois, and Taggart's Nebrascans woke up the Hoosiers. The leaders in the Parker camp worked hard to make a fine showing for the judge at the outset. It took after block of delegates cleared to their seats and were grim and dead. It was an ineffective demonstration and was soon extinguished.

Mr. Bryan raised a point walked with it to Mack's set himself for the battle. No smile on his face. Heard and his prominent as if carved from a steady glint in the rapidly over the his grenadiers was. Pennsylvania leaped on Mr. Bryan. He was not troubled, but he was not troubled.

lute quiet for the first time since the convention opened. Bryan's voice rang out suddenly as clear and vibrant as the stroke of a bell. He named John W. Kern, United States senator from Indiana, to oppose Judge Parker for the temporary chairmanship. But Kern's name did not wake up the Indiana delegates. Taggart had attended to that. Mr. Bryan went on quietly to speak, holding a palm-leaf fan in his right hand and gripping the rail of the speaker's box with his left. His chin was well up and forward and his great voice reached out to every far corner of the great hall.

Mr. Bryan declared that the national committee is not supreme in the party, and that as the champion of the party in previous campaigns he had a right to talk. He spoke of the enemies he had made, amid wild yells from his western supporters. With his unbridled genius for dramatic effect, Mr. Bryan coming to a defense of his own services, gestured toward a big motto set upon the east wall of the convention hall, over a picture of Andrew Jackson: "Who never sold the truth to serve the hour."

The art of the trick was apparent, but the gesture did not fail to bring applause. He told of the troubles of a progressive in the many lean years of the party, and thundered: "The song of victory should be sung by those whose hearts were in the fight." The colonel was going good by this time, and there were cheers after every phrase or so. He praised John Kern to the skies, and asked: "What better man?" The response was disconcerting. Hundreds yelled "Parker!"

It needed all of Bryan's vocal power to raise his denunciation over the uproar. Mr. Bryan got quiet after a time, but a singular whining yell from the galleries, a falsetto screech of "Parker" upset the order and broke the assembly into cheers and laughter. It began to look as if there was a concerted plan to bother Colonel Bryan. There were many in the convention thoroughly disgusted with the rough house tactics of both sides.

John W. Kern left the Indiana delegation and walked rapidly to the speaker's stand. Looking down directly to where Parker sat and holding the judge's eyes with his, he appealed to the choice of the national committee to get out of the way in the interest of harmony and make place for any one of a number of eminent Democrats whose selection as temporary chairman would create no friction. Senator Kern named them—O'Gorman of New York, Culberson of Texas, ex-Governor Folk of Missouri, Benjamin F. Shively of Indiana, Henry D. Clayton of Alabama, Luke Lea of Tennessee and James E. Campbell of Ohio.

"My greatest desire," added Senator Kern, "is to bring about harmony. I am going to appeal now for that kind of harmony which will bring about victory; that kind of harmony which will change sadness to shouts of victory. Judge Parker sits in this convention representing the national committee. I am going to ask him to join with me here and now in selecting a man satisfactory to both of us."

Senator Kern warned the convention that they might overcome Bryan, but that there would be trouble ahead if they were not careful.

"You may kill Bryan," he shouted, "but you won't commit homicide; you'll commit suicide."

Senator Shively of Indiana moved that the nominations be closed and the roll was called. It showed Parker 578; Bryan, 506. Indiana gave 21 votes to Parker, 8 to Bryan, and one absentee.

As Judge Parker moved up the aisle there was hardly a cheer raised. Even the delegations that had voted for him were mum and the Bryan men sat silent and sullen. It was impossible to imagine a chairman getting a chillier reception.

Judge Parker, dismissing his escort, drew from the inside pocket of his frock coat his prepared speech. The bend of his elbow served as a signal for the stampede to the door. He did his best to get the attention of the assemblage, but it was an impossible job. They were for the open air, and the pounding and stamping of feet and the clatter of tongues completely overwhelmed the judge's voice. Norman Mack and others of Parker's friends quickly saw the futility of attempting to put on a keynote under such unfavorable conditions, so after a whisper to the judge the manuscript speech was refolded and restored to the frock coat pocket and the judge adjourned the convention to meet at 8 p. m.

The crowds assembled slowly at the evening session and the convention was a half hour late in getting down to business. Even then the attendance of the public was small, less than a fourth of the gallery space being filled. William J. Bryan did not attend. He had an engagement to attend a fraternal gathering and some work with the resolutions sub-committee.

On being introduced Judge Parker was greeted with an enthusiastic demonstration. This was increased and the convention showed a growing friendly feeling for the temporary presiding officer when he complimented Mr. Bryan, asked the indulgence of the convention for his late adversary and urged the convention to honor Mr. Bryan with the chairmanship of the committee on resolutions. A motion to adjourn the convention until 2 p. m. today was knocked out. The delegates got the time set for noon and cheered over the success. The convention then adjourned at 9:35 p. m.

NO IMPATIENCE IN BRYAN'S ATTITUDE
Commoner Calmly Awaiting Future Events.

Baltimore, June 26.—In reply to many requests for a statement when he got back to his headquarters at the Hotel Belvidere after his defeat by Judge Parker for temporary chairman, Mr. Bryan said:

"I have no formal statement to make, because at present I know of nothing that need be explained. The vote of the convention shows pretty well the attitude of the convention. I now await the events to come in the future without any impatience. I don't know of anything else that I need add just now."

"How active a part do you propose to take in the building of the platform?" Mr. Bryan was asked.

"I shall attend the meetings of the resolutions committee," was the prompt answer, "and shall have a few minor requests to make of the committee."

Many of Mr. Bryan's audience during this brief talk gathered from his manner that during the coming convention days his attitude will be much more passive than heretofore. He was told that hotel lobbies had that he has been rapidly losing interest, and he was asked for a reply to these lobby stories.

"Questioning me as to whether I am losing interest," smiled Mr. Bryan, "is not so foolish as some might think. As to saying in advance how I shall feel at various stages of the convention proceedings, however, would be very foolish."

Friends of the Nebraskan laughed at the rumor of a Bryan bolt, and are assuring everybody that bolting is the last thing in Bryan's mind.

The first definite steps toward launching the new third party will be taken at a conference being held today at Oyster Bay.

PARKER SOUNDS PARTY KEYNOTE
Points Out to Democrats Their Duty.
ARRAIGNS THE REPUBLICANS

In Accepting the Temporary Chairmanship of the Democratic National Convention, Former Nominee For the Presidency Says "We are Called Upon to Do Battle Against the Unfaithful Guardians of Our Liberties."

Baltimore, June 26.—Judge Alton B. Parker, in his "keynote" speech before the Democratic national convention, pointed out incidents which he said served to disclose "the ligament that binds the Republican party to the interests preying on the people and defying the law." "Like the hypocrites of old, who loved to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets," he continued, "who prated of their virtues and gave thanks that they were not as other men, so have these corrupt leaders covered their vile misdeeds with hypocritical professions of righteousness. Woe unto you, hypocrites, for ye are like unto whitened sepulchers, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of corruption and all uncleanness that verily smells to heaven. Your day of doom is at hand."

"In jeopardizing our form of government and those dearly bought liberties which the fathers therein secured to us, the Republican apostles and promoters of misrule, federal usurpation and political corruption threaten the very foundations of the greatest cathedral builded by modern civilization. The cornerstone of that temple is Plymouth rock. The Declaration of Independence and our matchless constitution are embodied in the foundations thereof. In the outer shadow of its walls are clustered schools and colleges without number, where the sons of the millionaire and of the peddler from New York's crowded east side alike may attain the highest scholarship. Near at hand are the marts of trade where the heir of the financier and the offspring of the day laborer side by side, with no other limitations than those fixed by the personal capacity of each, contend for the prizes of fortune."

"Stretching to the western horizon are a thousand millions of acres where the descendants of the Mayflower pioneers and the children of the emigrant of yesterday may reap together the reward of content and comfort which comes to the faithful and intelligent tiller of the soil."

Menaced With Destruction.

"Take the wings of the morning and seek in the uttermost parts of the earth and in no other spot shall ye find such wide opportunity for man to develop the best that is in him. This fair and noble achievement, this matchless fabric, ill guarded, neglected, profaned and mutilated while in the custodianship of Republican officials, left open to attack of vandal, Socialist and alien anarchist, is menaced with destruction. If the threatened ruin comes, the happiness of the new world and the hope of the old will forever fail and the great march of modern civilization and true progress will be forever stayed."

"It is not the wild, swirling, cruel methods of revolution and violence that are needed to correct the abuses incident to our government as to all things human. Neither material or moral progress lies that way. We have made our government and our complicated institutions by appeals to reason, seeking to educate all our people that, day after day, year after year, century after century, they may see more clearly, act more justly, become more and more attached to the fundamental ideals that underlie our society."

Unfaithful Guardians.

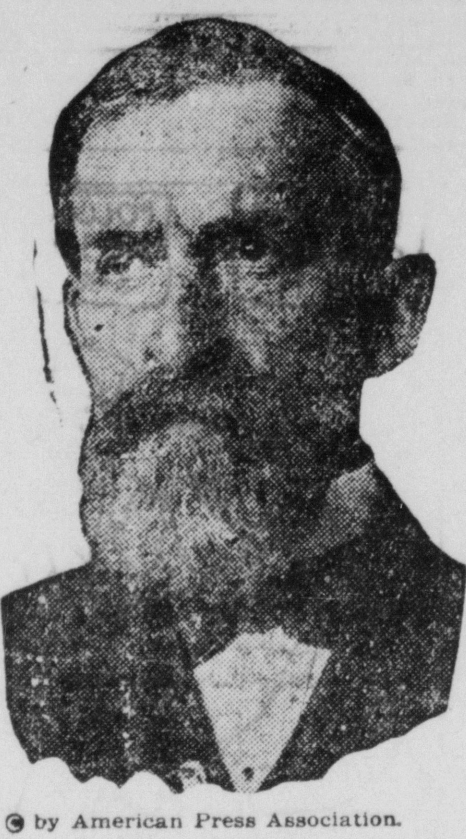

"We are called upon to do battle against the unfaithful guardians of our constitution and liberties and the hordes of ignorance which are pushing forward only to the ruin of our social and governmental fabric and their own deep damnation."

"Too long has the country endured the offenses of the leaders of a party which once knew greatness. Too long have we been blind to the bacchanal of corruption. Too long have we listlessly watched the assembling of the forces that threaten our country and our firesides. The time has come when the salvation of the country demands the destruction of the leaders of a debauched party and the restoration to place and power of men of high ideals who will wage unceasing warfare against corruption in politics, who will enforce the law against both rich and poor and who will treat guilt as personal and punish it accordingly."

"For their crimes against American citizenship the present leaders of the Republican party should be destroyed. All destruction will be theirs, this very year, if we but do our duty."

"It is our duty to put aside all selfishness, to consent cheerfully that the majority shall speak for each of us, and to march out of this convention shoulder to shoulder intoning the praises of our chosen leader—and that will be his due, whichever of the honorable and able men now claiming our attention be chosen."

THE BRYAN VOTE IS SIGNIFICANT
Commoner's Ambitions Given a Decisive Setback.
HE NO LONGER DOMINATES

Drubbing Nebraskan Got on Floor of Convention and Ordinary Character of Reception Accorded to Him by the Delegates Are Accepted as Guarantees That Ambition to Walk Away With Nomination Will Fail.

Baltimore, June 26.—By a vote of 578 to 506, William J. Bryan was overthrown in the Democratic national convention. The naming of Alton B. Parker as temporary chairman was the issue on which Mr. Bryan's downfall came. The commoner himself, after dramatic maneuvering on the floor of the convention, entered the contest as a candidate for temporary chairman, and the showdown between the Bryan and anti-Bryan forces was therefore clean-cut and decisive.

Only one big issue was involved in the struggle. It was whether William J. Bryan was again to dominate a national convention and for the fourth time nominate himself for president. The outcome of the battle, in the opinion of Democratic leaders, has ended Mr. Bryan's prospects of again leading his party in a national campaign. The drubbing he got on the floor of the convention and the ordinary character of the reception accorded to him by the delegates, are accepted as guarantees that his ambition to walk away with the 1912 prize will not be gratified.

No attempt, however, is made by the Democrats assembled here to detract from the remarkable showing of Mr. Bryan against the party organization. The 506 votes that he polled were purely a tribute to his personality and the grip he has had upon the party. The Bryan vote was strong enough to insure to him a commanding voice in the deliberations of the convention, and the Democratic conservatives are reconciled to the fact that Mr. Bryan will be able to shape the platform that is to be adopted at this convention. They are convinced, however, that his game to garner a nomination has effectively been blocked, unless the forces that carried the contest unexpectedly blunder and alienate some of the strength that has rallied under the anti-Bryan banner.

The vote was the first development in the Democratic situation from which fairly accurate deductions as to the future can be drawn. The balloting demonstrated that the convention will be controlled by progressives and the likelihood is that a so-called progressive will be named for president. In the opinion of many of the Democratic leaders, the situation has now narrowed down to Champ Clark and Woodrow Wilson, with Mayor Gaynor of New York as a possible compromise in the event of a deadlock.

While Judge Parker and his friends were able to muster a sufficient number of votes to bring about his election to the temporary chairmanship, many radicals voted for him because they were frightened at the idea of Bryan again becoming the party's nominee. These votes added to the 506 that were cast for Bryan indicates that the Democrats of radical tendencies are firmly seated in the saddle.

To Champ Clark is due in large measure the conditions for the defeat of Mr. Bryan. Mr. Clark threw as much of his strength as possible against the Nebraska delegate and his old-time friend. The speaker did this because he was satisfied that if Bryan carried the fight for the chairmanship he would dominate the convention and be the party's nominee. The conservatives who advanced the candidacy of Judge Parker openly acknowledge their debt to Mr. Clark, and Mr. Bryan is just as keenly alive to the hostile attitude that the speaker has assumed toward him.

What the effect of these developments will be upon the Clark boom is uncertain. Many believe the speaker has placed the conservatives of the party so strongly under obligations to him that they will be obliged to throw their strength to him after the first few ballots in the convention. If Clark can hold his present strength of about 450 delegates and New York swings to him, his nomination probably will be assured. The impetus given to the Clark movement by New York's big block of delegates, would, it is thought, attract enough more to bring his total up to the necessary 728 votes.

ROOSEVELT CLUB HOLDS A MEETING

Preliminary Plans For the Proposed
New Party Are Discussed.—Call Is Awaited.

RESOLUTIONS ARE ADOPTED

Attack The Republican National Convention—Slogan "Thou Shalt Not Steal" is Chosen.

The Jackson County Roosevelt Club held a meeting at the city building Tuesday night which was attended by about forty-five members. The meeting was called to order by President Harley Jackson, and the other officers John Goodale, vice-president, Noble Moore, secretary and W. H. Burkley, treasurer were present.

A number of talks were made by the members present and the preliminary plans for the proposed new party were discussed. No further action will be taken until the call for the third party is issued. The members expect that this will be made at a later date.

The nomination of President Taft at the Chicago convention was attacked, and a resolution was passed condemning the act of the Republican national convention in nominating President Taft "with stolen delegates passed by the Republican national convention." The resolution also provided that "no man is morally bound to support such a candidate." The resolution also pledged the support of the club to Theodore Roosevelt and his progressive policies. A slogan "Thou Shalt Not Steal" was adopted. The resolutions were all passed unanimously.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE

THE SCAPEGOAT.

The other day I read a letter that almost made me cry.

The letter was from a young girl of about eleven years to a friend of mine, asking him to help save her family from going to pieces. For a year her father and mother had been quarreling, and now they had agreed the mother should apply for divorce. They supposed the secret had been well kept from the little daughter, but she had overheard much of the difficulty and the whole wretched agreement.

My friend was bold enough to intervene—in vain!

And I can still hear the piteous wail of that poor child as it was voiced in her tear stained letter.

Now, I do not say where a couple is childless and after long forbearance and patience it is found impossible to agree there never should be a divorce, but that on Scriptural grounds there may never be cause for separation.

But—
I do say, if there are children, the parents have no moral right—none whatever—to break up the family and blight the lives of those children.

The rights of the children are paramount. Always they must first be taken into consideration. However the parents may suffer, it is their foremost duty to keep the walls of the home together and give to the children the environment of the family.

Poor child!

How could her father and mother, however strong or angry at each other, how could they sit down together and deliberately agree to make their child miserable for life?

Compared with her welfare and happiness what were their strifes and jealousies? What their misunderstandings or discord compared with her future? What their sins and weakness compared with her rights as a child of the family?

Truly and without consulting her they thrust upon the slender shoulders of their child all their sins and shames.

Forward!

What ought they to have done? Locked tight the doors of their skeleton closets, locked tight the doors of their lips, and suffered the pains of martyrdom?

Not at all!

Always it is the child who is the safeguard of the craven divorcees. In stead of protecting the child, who needs protection against itself, they withdraw the bulwark of the home and thrust out their tender flesh and blood.

Have these parents no fear of that voice of the who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me"? Will they put a millstone about their necks by "suffering one of these" little ones?

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and the tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is (being but an inflamed condition of the mucous services.

We will give One Hundred Dollars to any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Dr. J. C. Cheney's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular free.

Battle of Mechanicsville, near Richmond. Confederates attacked the first line of defense of General Fitz-John Porter's corps, which formed the right wing of McClellan's army. General J. F. Reynolds' division of Pennsylvania reserves defended the ground and held the Confederates in check all day. This was the first blow of Lee and Jackson to drive the Federal army from its trenches in front of Richmond. General John Pope was appointed to command the Federal troops in front of Washington. General J. C. Fremont resigned from the army.

Principles More Than Life

Pathway of American History Written in Blood and Sacrifice.

LIFE is dear to all of us, and the Almighty meant it to be; but principle, and especially religious principles, are a greater treasure than life. Somehow or other it seems that all great principles have made their way up over the sacrificed lives of martyrs in the right. The pathway of American history is written in the blood and sacrifice of the fathers from Plymouth Rock to now; so of the Church. The torture and the stake have been the steps to the freedom of religion from the shackles of religious tyranny. What a wonderful path the path of history is! When a man or a woman loves principle more than self or life, there will be an effort to establish it. Had not the founders of our State and Church stood for the principles of free government and conscientious action in religion, neither our present glorious State or Christian civilization would ever have been attained.

Religion is nothing without the truth. Ancient history shows that all teaching, philosophy and worship were false and vain without revelation. All the progress of modern times in the greatest nations of the world is due to the presence and spirit and influence of the truth of revelation and of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. So, when this is committed to us with this injunction, "Go ye into all the world," it is not for us to question expense, labor or results. Our work and mission is to act. This refers to women as well as to men. And, indeed, this experience is essential to the development of a true discipleship in each individual man or woman. Hence we urge upon laymen and laywomen to identify themselves with this noble cause. First, for the sake of the truth, for the sake of the kingdom of God, that it may be spread abroad upon the whole earth. And then, second, for the reflex influence upon yourself. This kind of work is necessary for the development of the truest kind of a religious spirit. If we are not working for others or for the kingdom, we grow selfish and diminish our personal enjoyment of religion.

Barriers to Success.

Activity is as essential in religion as in physical and mental growth. Loving life and loving self is our greatest barrier to success in all undertakings, and as well in religion. Had our fathers and mothers in the life of the Christian church or of the State loved their lives more than the principles for which they stood, what would have become of civil and religious liberty? Now we can look all the way back to Abraham, Moses, the prophets, and apostles, and coming down through centuries we find along the pages of history the lives of saints, patriots and martyrs that went out on the altar of principle. Men and women of the twentieth century, the principle is the same. We must take an active part in the development of character, patriotism, church work, and the spread of the Gospel if we are to save the nations, the Christian church, and even our own lives. Principle must be elevated over life.

This is the greatest and most momentous age in history. If we are ever going to save the world, it must be now. Over the graves of patriots, heroes, prophets, martyrs, apostles and missionaries may be written these words: "They loved not their lives unto death. Patriots bleeding, wounded, suffering and thirsty and faint lay all day and night on the battlefield or behind prison walls that you might enjoy a goodly country and a prosperous and happy life and home. Saints and martyrs have gone to death with songs and prayers on their lips that you and I and coming generations might have the truth.

Shall we not be true to these things? Shall we not maintain this noble character as a sacred heritage? This is the measure of heroes and saints. These are the men and women who have made history. They are the ancestors other nations and ages worship as deity. Shall we not stand, then, where they stood and for the same thing for which they stood? Shall we not join the great Christian forces, and start on in this splendid life? Will we let all of this burden fall on others? Shall the work cease, or will we rally to the rescue? What is your response today? Morals, truth, religion and the world need the missionary spirit more than anything else. We need it in society, politics, the world and the church. And perhaps more than all in the individual heart and in the home. We must quicken the Christian church and its members until they reach the spirit of sacrifice and of forgetting of self. Men and women who will represent great religious interests and stand for them in the great moral and religious issues of this century, are needed.—Rev. J. M. Reimensnyder, D. D.

God's Handiwork.

The "very good" of the creation week was not God's last verdict upon his work, but this: "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." God is better satisfied with Jesus than he ever could have been with Adam. And his final workmanship is the redeemed man who is "created anew in Christ Jesus." To every new-born soul the spirit witnesses, "well pleased;" and to every glorified life the king shall say "Well done!"

A Clear Case.

"Why," said the plaintiff, "the car was going so fast there wasn't time for the crystal to break, sir."—Harper's Weekly.

IT NEVER FAILED.

The young man who reads the papers had a choice lower berth in the Pullman.

He had noticed that day the story of the young man who had given up his lower berth to a lady several years before and was remembered in her will to the extent of $98,000.

As he entered the car he heard a woman expostulating with the conductor. There was no berth for her. As she passed the young man she dropped a bank book. The young man picked it up and quite by accident noticed that it showed a red ink balance of $50,000.

The young man gave the lady the bank book and his berth in the same sentence.

A little later the woman glanced at the book and smiled.

"It never fails to work," she murmured.

A TREACHEROUS TROUBLE.

Seymour People Point the Way Out.

Kidney diseases are very dangerous. They come on silently, gain ground rapidly, and cause thousands of deaths that could have been prevented by proper treatment in the beginning. Nature gives early warnings of kidney disease—backache, twinges of pain when stooping or lifting, headaches and urinary disorders. If these symptoms are unheeded, there is grave danger of dropsy or fatal Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills have earned a reputation for their effectiveness in kidney troubles, and are known and recommended the world over. Seymour testimony proves the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills to our readers.

Mrs. George Kramer, 206 S. Broadway, Seymour, Ind., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills were used in my family with gratifying results and consequently I give them my highest endorsement. I know that Doan's Kidney Pills cure backache and other symptoms of kidney complaint."

TOWERED OVER SHIP'S MASTS

Commanders of Vessels Supply New Information as to Height of Atlantic Waves.

It is very doubtful if the log of any naval vessel of the world contains records equal to those of the Roa. Lieut. Commander C. H. Woodward has stated that he never expected to bring his craft through the immense waves. The indicator on the bridge, which was at times the only part of the vessel out of water, showed that the little craft rolled 90 degrees, being at times clear over on her beam ends. Just at the time when the commanders of the little squadron estimated that the gale was at its height and blowing practically 90 miles an hour the Roa's steering gear gave way and she dropped into the trough of the sea. This little vessel's masts are 52 feet high from the water line, says the Christian Herald, and although it has been stated that the highest wave yet recorded upon the Atlantic ocean was not more than 30 feet in height, Commander Woodward's estimate that the waves of the recent storm overtopped his masts by several feet has been borne out by the officers not only of the smaller ships but even of the battleship Delaware.

CHAPTER VI.

The Third Suicide.

Something had happened. I awoke the next morning with a start and sat up in bed listening to the strange confusion in the hotel. Instinctively I recognized that the sensation of the unusual that so affected me was something more than the feeling every one experiences on suddenly awaking for the first time in a strange place.

I sprang from the bed and, opening my door, looked out into the hall. I could see nothing, for a turn of the corridor shut me off from the main hall. From the floor below came the confused murmur of many voices and the sound of men moving about—many men. My first thought was of fire, but there were no cries and there was no smell of smoke. The memory of my experience in the post-office recurred to me. I vaguely wondered if I had been tracked and discovered.

I hastened to dress. If they suspected me of robbing the post-office, the sooner I found out the sooner I could plan some method of action. As I put on my collar I heard footsteps in the corridor, and, coatless as I was, I flung open my door. A chambermaid was passing.

"What's the matter?" I asked. "Haven't you heard about it?" she asked in wonder.

"Heard about what?" "The suicide in the hotel—in the room right under yours. They discovered it hours ago. The coroner's just come and is getting ready to hold the inquest."

"Who was he?" I asked. I was thinking it might be Hugh Crandall, dead in some suicide pact with Katharine. A sense of disappointment began to take hold of me. I felt that if it were Crandall my efforts to clear the mystery would be still more futile, but the woman's answer quickly dispelled the thought.

"It wasn't a 'he.' It's a woman." She hurried on down the corridor and I hastened to finish my dressing, recalling as I did so Davis' belief that there would be other suicides. It seemed absurd that there could be any connection between the suicide of a woman in a country hotel in an obscure New Jersey village and the two suicides the day before in New York, and yet there was at least one link between them. It was Crandall who had telephoned Katharine. Some one had telephoned Elser, too. It was Crandall's rooms that we had found the address of this place where the third suicide in the series had taken place.

With the triumphant feeling that my friend the inspector finally would have to accept my theory of Crandall's guilt, I hurried down-stairs and forced my way into the room where the coroner had already begun his inquest.

On the bed, covered with a sheet, except for the face, lay the lifeless body of a woman perhaps fifty, the face still distorted from the death agony. A bit of rope attached to a rod among the rafters of the room showed that she had hung herself. The woman's outer clothing lay neatly piled on a chair near the bed. This much I had time to notice before the coroner finished selecting his jury. Near the coroner, too, I observed the man whom the clerk had called Cook. I thought he gave a quick glance in my direction, but I could not be sure. The first witness was called, Mahlon Williams, the proprietor of the hotel.

"Mr. Williams," said the coroner, "do you know this woman?"

"I can't say as I do."

"What was her name?"

"She was registered here in the hotel. The name's on the book. You can see for yourself. I don't know if it 'twas her real name or not."

"Mary Jane Teller, Bridgeport, Conn.," was the entry in the hotel register which was produced and submitted for the jurors' inspection.

"Tell us, Mr. Williams, what you know about the deceased."

"Mighty little; nothing at all, in fact. She come here night before last. Got in on the seven-two train from New York, I calculate, from the time of her arrival. She had no baggage, and she asked for a room for the night—a cheap room. She seemed so feeble I gave her this room on the ground floor, No. 4, and only charged her seventy-five cents for it, though it's a dollar room, or a dollar and a half for bridal couples. She paid for it for one night and right after supper she went into it and stayed there. Yesterday morning after breakfast she went out somewhere and was gone maybe an hour or an hour and a half. I didn't see her when she come in but I heard—"

"Mahlon Williams," said the coroner severely, "you ought to know enough about the law to understand that what you heard ain't evidence. Tell only them things you know of your own knowledge."

"All I know," said Williams, perceptibly miffed, "is that she come out along about three in the afternoon and paid another seventy-five cents for staying she wanted the room another night. That's all I seen of her."

"Can I ask a question?" said one of the jurors, all of whom were townsmen of the class usually to be found around the hotel bar-room.

"If it is a proper question," said the coroner judiciously.

"Where did she go when she went out?"

"The question is a proper one, if the witness can answer it of his own knowledge," the coroner ruled.

"If I knowed I'd a told already," said the hotel keeper.

One or two of the other jurors asked questions, prompted plainly more by curiosity than by intelligent effort to ascertain the facts; but it was plain that Mr. Williams had revealed all that he knew, and he was dismissed.

Doctor Allen, who had been sent for as soon as the suicide was discovered, gave it as his opinion that the woman had hung herself early the evening before, as nearly as he could judge about five o'clock.

"Who was it found the body?" the coroner asked.

"Mary Evans, the chambermaid," the constable volunteered. "Here she is, right here."

The coroner proceeded to examine her.

Much embarrassed by the prominence into which she found herself thrust, but manifestly enjoying the unusual situation, the girl told how, early in the morning, as soon as she began her work, she had gone to the room.

"I didn't know there was anyone in No. 4," she explained. "I knew the woman had taken it for just one night and I hadn't bothered making it up the day before. None of the other roomers was up yet and I thought I might just as well get No. 4 off my mind. I knocked like I always do and getting no answer I opened the door right wide all of a sudden. Such a shock as it gave me I never expect to have again to my dying day. There was the poor creature a-hanging there. I let a yell out of me that must have waked the dead, and then I ran and called Mr. Williams."

"Had you seen the deceased on the day previous?"

"Yes, but she wasn't deceased when I saw her."

"Did you have any conversation with her?"

"No more than to pass the time of day with her you might say."

I was thoroughly disgusted with the drivelling way in which the proceedings were being carried on. I could see little hope of any discovery that would establish connection with the looked startled. I was amazed now to see him edging toward the door. I was tempted to demand that he be restrained and searched. I felt almost sure that if the pieces of the yellow letter were to be found anywhere it would be in his pocket. Yet second thought advised against such rash action. I had no positive proof that Cook was Crandall. Until I had, surely it would be unwise to accuse him. I remembered that there was no train by which he could leave the town until late in the afternoon, so there was little prospect that he could escape me.

"How did you know it was a yellow letter?" the coroner asked me suspiciously, pausing suddenly in his search.

It was an awkward question. I realized that my impetuosity had placed me in a predicament. I was by no means ready to tell him the whole story, and yet the fact that I knew or suspected the color of the letter that she was tearing up certainly indicated that I knew something about the woman.

"I didn't know it."

"Well, what'd you ask the question about it for?" he repeated, his suspicion of me rapidly increasing.

I was thinking quickly what I could say that would divert his thoughts. I noticed with annoyance that the eyes of every one in the room were on me and that they were curiously awaiting an answer. I assumed an air of mystery and drew the coroner to one side.

"I am perfectly willing to tell you everything," I said. "I am out here on another matter that is something of a mystery in which a yellow letter figures. The letter has disappeared. I never saw or heard of this old woman before, but when the witness mentioned that she was tearing up a letter a sudden notion came to me that it might be the one of which I was in search. A detective who is working on the case will be out here this evening and then I can tell you more about it."

I spoke the last sentence in a whisper so low that it reached only the coroner's ear. He pondered over my statement and then abruptly announced that the inquest was adjourned until nine o'clock the next day. I would have escaped him if I could, but I saw that he was determined to worm out everything I knew or suspected. I decided that activity would be the best remedy for his curiosity. Accordingly I invited the coroner and the constable to come up to my rooms where, without waiting for them to question me, I began firing questions hot-shot at them, suggesting things for them to do, simple things that would have been the first thought of the police of New York or any other large city, but which they had not thought of. Had they telephoned a description of the woman to the Bridgeport police with her name to see if she could be identified as any one who was missing from that city? Had they examined her clothing to see if there was any mark on it that might identify her? Had they studied her writing on the register to see if it gave any indication of being assumed or disguised? Had they examined her pocketbook to see if it contained any clue to a motive? Had they considered whom she might have come to this town to see?

"That idea of calling up the Bridgeport police ain't such a bad one," said the coroner. "Suppose you do it now," he said, turning to the constable.

"I'd like to know who's going to pay for it if I do," the constable objected. "There ain't enough fees in this office for me to be spending my money that way."

"You go ahead and do it and I'll see that you get the money back."

"If you're going to pay it out of your own pocket I'll do it, but if you expect me to wait till you put it through as a lawful expense I ain't taking no chances."

Their petty wrangling over such a trifling amount exasperated me not a little.

"Here," said I, pulling a five-dollar bill from my pocket, "take this and pay for it and tell them to telephone you as soon as they can what they have found out. This ought to cover both the message and the answer and if there is anything left get yourself some cigars with it."

The constable needed no second bidding. As soon as he had disappeared I turned to the coroner:

"Did you notice that man Cook at the inquest? Who is he?"

"I don't know who you mean," he replied. "The only Cook I know here in the town is Doc Cook, and he's laid up with a broken leg."

"Didn't you notice a tall smoothshaven fellow who stood right close beside where you were sitting? He listened closely to the testimony and the minute we began looking for the scraps of the letter, didn't you see him slip out of the room?"

"Come to think of it," said the coroner, "I believe I did notice him, but I can't say as I seen him going out. Maybe 'twas one of the guests of the hotel."

"I think he is, and I'm pretty sure he's registered in the hotel as Mr. Cook, too, but I'd like to know more about him."

"Let's go down and ask Mahlon. If there's anybody in his hotel he don't know about it's something unusual."

We found Mahlon Williams in the little boxed-off corner behind the hotel desk that was labeled "Private Office." The curious crowd was still gaping at the door of the room where the suicide had taken place, at least such of them as had not adjourned to the bar to talk it over, so that we were alone in the office.

"Mr. Williams," I said, "what do you know about this man Cook, who is stopping here in the hotel?"

"No more than I know about you," said he, "and not as much, in fact, for he didn't ask no peculiar questions at the inquest. Speaking about that letter—"

"How long has this man Cook been in the house?" I interrupted, determined not to let either him or the coroner annoy me with questions.

The hotel-keeper, plainly provoked at my attitude, stared thoughtfully at me for a minute and finally decided to answer my question as the only hope of getting me to answer his.

"He came just the night before you did—got in on the seven-two train."

His answer settled everything in my mind. Cook was Crandall. The arrival of Cook in the village coincided with the departure of Crandall from New York. The haste in which he had departed was explicable by the arrival of the old woman on that train. Evidently he wanted for some reason to arrive in the village at the same time that she did. What had been his motive was still a mystery to me. It flashed across my mind that perhaps, after all, her death might not have been suicide. A clever criminal might easily arrange things to look as though she had hung herself. I determined to make an investigation to see if there was any evidence to prove this, but I said nothing of my suspicions as yet. I already regretted my precipitancy in asking about the yellow letter. The questions of the landlord and the coroner might be deferred for a while, but sooner or later I would have to make some explanation, and I had none to give.

"What is Cook's business?" I asked the landlord hastily, anticipating a question I saw forming on his lips.

"I don't know. He kind of looked to me like a traveling-man—or a lawyer. What was—"

The return of the constable from telephoning saved my answering the question he was about to ask.

"There ain't no woman missing from Bridgeport that the police know anything about," he said sententiously.

"Did ye tell them her name?" asked the coroner.

"Yep. They say there's only three families of Tellers in the telephone book and only four in the directory, and they are going to look them up and telephone inside of an hour."

"Maybe her name wasn't Teller," suggested the hotel-keeper. "I recollect seeing her kind of hesitate as she went to write in the register."

"That's just what I was thinking," I cried, glad to divert his attention once more. "Let us go and look at the register and then examine her clothing. Maybe there are some marks on it."

"That's a good idea," said the coroner. "Wonder we didn't think of that before."

The hotel register showed us little save the name "Mary Jane Teller" in the tremulous old-fashioned hand little used to handling the pen. There was perhaps a little more space between the last two names than after the first—as if she hesitated a moment while deciding what name to use or perhaps with an honest woman's natural aversion to assuming any other name than her own.

"Let's look at the clothing," I suggested, eager for an opportunity to see whether there were any indications that would point to anything other than suicide.

The four of us hastened to the room again. To my annoyance I noted that the rope had been removed from the rafters, though the woman's outer clothing still lay piled on the chair. There seemed to be nothing about the inexpensive black suit to identify the owner, no mark of any kind except the label of the concern in New York from which it had been purchased.

"Where's the black bag she carried?" asked the coroner.

"There was some money in it," Mr. Williams replied. "I put it in the safe."

As we left the room to return to the hotel office I gave a hasty glance at the corpse. From the condition of the face and throat it was all too plain that death had been by strangulation, still, I reasoned, a powerful man might have strangled the woman first and hanged her afterward to conceal his crime. I determined to put the theory up to Davis as soon as he arrived.

Twirling the knob of the ancient safe that stood in the corner, the hotel-keeper reached in and drew out a well-worn hand-bag of black leather and upset the contents on the desk. There were three one-dollar bills, neatly folded, three dimes and eight pennies—a meager amount, that suggested the suicide of a poor woman, but whatever its purpose, there was a half-ticket, the return stub of a ticket from Bridgeport and another one from New York to Ardway, and that was all, save two neatly folded black-bordered handkerchiefs.

"Looks like she came from Bridgeport, after all," the constable volunteered.

"Maybe she did," said the landlord, unfolding one of the handkerchiefs and holding it up to our gaze. "Maybe she did come from Bridgeport, but her name wasn't Teller—not Mary Jane Teller by a long shot."

In the corner of each handkerchief was a neatly embroidered "S."

It gave me quite a shock as I looked at that mute evidence of her assumed name, to her effort to mask her identity.

Could her name have been Elser? Was this the way in which she was connected with the two suicides in New York? But even so, suppose she was the sister or relative, or even the unrecognized wife of old Andrew Elser, what possible connection could these two humble people have with Katharine Farrish?

The mystery was growing deeper. How I wished that Inspector Davis would come.

A VALUABLE SUGGESTION.

Important to Everyone.

It is now conceded by physicians that the kidneys should have more attention as they control the other organs to a remarkable degree and do a tremendous amount of work in removing the poisons and waste matter from the system by filtering the blood.

During the winter months especially, when we live in indoor life, the kidneys should receive some assistance when needed, as we take less exercise, drink less water and often eat more rich heavy food, thereby forcing the kidneys to do more work than Nature intended. Evidence of kidney trouble, such as lame back, inability to hold urine, smarting or burning, brick-dust or sediment, slow complexion, rheumatism, may be weak or irregular heart action, warns you that your kidneys require help immediately to avoid more serious trouble.

An herbal medicine containing no mineral or opiates has the most healing influence. An ideal herbal compound that has had most remarkable success as a kidney and bladder remedy is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by mail, absolutely free. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and mention the Seymour Daily Republican.

N. Y., and mention the Seymour Weekly Republican.

Speech Strangely Restored.

While attending a picture show in Melbourne, Victoria, recently, his speech and hearing began to return to a young man who, during the previous harvest season, had lost both these faculties through fear. While engaged in harvesting operations in the Jorham district, he trod on a big black snake, which immediately coiled itself around his leg. He was not bitten by the reptile, but was nevertheless greatly alarmed, so much so that he went into a fit, under the influence of which he remained for some time, and then lost the powers of speech and hearing. The scenes depicted at the picture show were of a thrilling character, and on the following day he could utter a few words. Subsequently his speech was restored completely.

Drives Off a Terror.

The chief executioner of death in the winter and spring months is pneumonia. Its advance agents are colds and grip. In any attack by one of these maladies no time should be lost in taking the best medicine obtainable to drive it off. Countless thousands have found this to be Dr. King's New Discovery. "My husband believes it has kept him from having pneumonia three or four times," writes Mrs. George W. Place, Rawsonville, Vt., and for coughs and colds and croup we have never found its equal." Guaranteed for all bronchial affections. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free at The Andrews Drug Co., Seymour, Ind.

Business Victim.

"Does you member dat dawg I used to have?" asked Mr. Erastus Pinkley.

"Yes," replied Uncle Raspberry. "You means dat mixed dog?"

"He was kind o' mixed; he was what I calls a black-an'-tan-dale terrier. Well, sub, dat dawg ain't brought me nuffin' but bad luck. I sold 'im to a man for two dollars, and de two dollars he slipped me were counterfeit."

"What you giner do?"

"Whut kin I do? If I shows 'im any way to prove de transaction was un-legal, he's giner make me take de dawg back."

Could Shout for Joy.

"I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart," wrote C. B. Rader, of Lewisburg, W. Va., "for the wonderful double benefit I got from Electric Bitters, in curing me of both a severe case of stomach trouble and of rheumatism, from which I had been an almost helpless sufferer for ten years. It suited my case as though made just for me." For dyspepsia, indigestion, jaundice, and to rid the system of kidney poisons that cause rheumatism, Electric Bitters have no equal. Try them. Every bottle is guaranteed to satisfy. Only 50 cents at The Andrews Drug Co., Seymour, Ind.

MARSHALL MAY BE TAMMANY'S CHOICE

Marshall and to do in the fight for the Governor what he can in return for what they say Marshall did for him in the senatorial fight in 1911. There is yet to be discovered in the actions of Kern, it is pointed out, anything which indicates any lack of loyalty to Marshall, but it has been known for a long time that outside of Indiana there is a good deal of Kern sentiment, which may gather in the next two days into a movement which may place him at the head of the candidate list.

The delegates agreed that in case the Kern movement should reach the point where the Indiana vote of 30 would nominate Kern the vote should be given him, as by that time there would not be ground for further hope that the place could be obtained for Governor Marshall. It has been agreed that the delegation in case Kern's name is presented, is to continue to vote for Marshall until some such condition comes about. Whether this agreement will stand, is a question. It is not a caucus arrangement.

It is generally agreed among the Indiana people who have been visiting other delegates in the convention that if Taggart is in earnest about the nomination of Marshall, and really wishes it brought about, the place can be landed for the Indiana Governor. Taggart's real position continues to be a puzzle even to his intimate friends, if one is to accept at its face value what they say. Significant is the fact, it is pointed out, that the Indiana Democrats who came to Baltimore to "knock" the Governor's boom, are not knocking, but are helping in the missionary work.

SOCIAL EVENTS.

Breakfast Party.

One of the most delightful social affairs enjoyed by the house guests of Miss Marguerite Miller was the ten o'clock formal breakfast party given yesterday morning by Mrs. Leroy Miller. The color scheme of pink and white was carried out in the decorations and throughout the several courses. The dining room was prettily decorated with flowers and greenery and upon the table were an abundance of lilies, pink geraniums, and ferns arranged in the most artistic and attractive manner. A large mirror surrounded with flowers and ferns formed the center piece. Mrs. Miller was assisted with the breakfast by Miss Marietta Sawyer.

Covers were laid for ten guests as follows: Miss Grace Witty, of Brazil, Miss Bonnie Taylor, of Linton, and Miss Ruth Shrader, of New Albany, the house guests, and the Misses Luella Toms, Lora Reynolds, Ethel Rottman, Lula Cunningham, Edna Dobbins, Lois Reynolds and Marguerite Miller.

Birthday Anniversary.

Mrs. E. H. Ahlbrand of South Chestnut street entertained the Ladies' Society of the German Lutheran church Tuesday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock in honor of her sixtieth birthday. About seventy-five members were present. She received a number of valuable presents. After supper she entertained her children and grand children. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served. The family presented her with a lawn vase.

Slumber Party.

Miss Luella Toms entertained the house guests of Miss Marguerite Miller, with a slumber party at her home on West Second street Monday evening. The affair was one of the most delightful enjoyed by the party.

Besides the guests, Misses Grace Witty, of Brazil, Bonnie Taylor of Linton and Ruth Shrader of New Albany, there were present the Misses Lora Reynolds, Elsie Reynolds, Lois Reynolds and Marguerite Miller.

A chafing dish lunch was served.

Porch Party.

Miss Joy Hopewell entertained the Devoir Society last evening at her home on North Chestnut street with a porch party. At the regular business hour which was in charge of the president, Mrs. F. W. Wesner, new by-laws were adopted by the Society. During the social hours Miss Ella Davison gave the story of "Hamlet." Refreshments were served.

Entertained.

Miss Lois Reynolds and Miss Lora Reynolds entertained informally Tuesday afternoon at the home of the former on West Second street complimentary to the Misses Grace Witty, Bonnie Taylor and Ruth Shrader, the house guests of Miss Marguerite Miller. Elegant refreshments were served.

Informal Dance.

An informal dance will be given at the Country Club this evening by the June social committee.
